

VIETNAM

1 November 1955 – 30 April 1975

Barrie Vane Barnes

Specialist, 4th Class, United States Army (Regular)

Entered the Service from Salisbury, Maryland

Barrie was born 8 December 1946. SP 4 Vanes began his tour of duty in Vietnam on 16 April 1966, with the 25th Infantry Division. He was 19 years old when he was killed in action in South Vietnam on 6 May 1966. Vanes is listed on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Panel 07E, Line 31.

The following information was shared by Chris Barnes, Ocean City, Maryland, in May 2008.

My name is Chris Barnes and I am the only sibling of Barrie Vane Barnes who was the first soldier from Wicomico County to be killed in The Vietnam War. Barrie was 6 years older than me and was truly my Big brother. Until the Army, he was 6'4" tall and weighed about 300 pounds. When he was killed, he was very fit at 240 pounds. His heart matched his body size. He would do anything for anybody – and that's how he lost his life. Barrie went to Campus Elementary School which was on the campus of STC (Salisbury Teacher's College). Carruther's Hall was the home of the school on the campus of [what is now] Salisbury University. In High School, he attended Charlotte Hall Military Academy and came back to graduate from Wicomico Senior High in 1964. Barrie was really never focused on academics – but he sure was focused on life and having a great time. From racing his car at the Delmar drag strip to breezing around the Oaks Drive-In to sneaking cigarettes at school, etc. I have often said he only lived to be 19, but he lived one Hell of a full life. We grew up on Virginia Avenue in Salisbury. Our Dad was Bob Barnes who owned a Television and Appliance Store where Barrie worked during the summers and whenever Dad needed him. Barrie liked to play pranks on people. I remember hearing about the time he relieved himself in an empty beer bottle and replaced the cap and chilled it only to give it to Dan - one of Dad's loyal employees. When he was younger, he found Christmas toys that Dad had hidden in an attic storage area at his store. The attic had areas where there was no flooring – only rafters. Barrie fell through the rafters, through the ceiling and landed on the floor with one of the toys in his lap. Our Mom is Norma Barnes. She and Dad were married 2 weeks shy of 50 years when my Dad passed away after suffering from Alzheimer's. Mom was truly June Cleaver. She always had breakfast each morning. Not cereal but eggs, bacon and toast. She and Barrie were very close and she was a great Mom. Barrie found himself in the Army. He went to Alaska for the first 18 months of his enlistment and then he volunteered to go fight in Viet Nam. Back then, the Army sent you to Hawaii for "jungle training". My parents, thank God, were able to scrape enough money together to visit him over there. That was the last time they would be together. Several months ago, I submitted a request to the Army to provide more details of his death. He was wounded in the leg. After being put on a stretcher, he saw one of his buddies shot and he jumped off the stretcher, grabbed his gun and started running toward his friend when he was shot three times in the chest. He was only in Viet Nam 6 days. Our family was known throughout the shore because of Dad's business and the family's community involvement. Additionally, as I have stated, Barrie was the first soldier in Wicomico County killed. It was a devastating time for the family and also for the many friends of Barrie and the rest of the family. He had a funeral with full military honors. It was one of the biggest funerals of the time in Salisbury. My Dad could not go. He was absolutely numb with emotion. Barrie was awarded the Purple Heart and the Silver Star for heroism.

Mom and Dad never really recovered from Barrie's death. No parent ever does. But when your child is killed by an unknown enemy 12,000 miles away in a jungle at age 19, it's hard to make any sense of it – particularly knowing how we fought the war and how we left the war.

What a great guy he was. I miss him everyday and there have been so many times in my life when I wished I had a big brother to talk with and play with and love. He would have had a gazillion children. And I would have proudly been Uncle Chris.

Instead, I am proudly the little brother of Barrie Barnes. I wish the whole world could have known him. It would certainly be a better place!!

Richard Waller Cooper, Jr.

Major, United States Air Force (Reserve)

307th Stratofortress Wing, Utapao Air Base Thailand

Entered the Service from Salisbury, Maryland
Richard was born 18 November 1942.

Frustrated by problems in negotiating a peace settlement, and pressured by a Congress and public wanting an immediate end to American involvement in Vietnam, President Nixon ordered the most concentrated air offensive of the war – known as Linebacker II – in December 1972. During the offensive, sometimes called the “Christmas bombings,” 40,000 tons of bombs were dropped, primarily over the area between Hanoi and Haiphong. White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said that the bombing would end only when all U. S. POWs were released and an internationally recognized cease-fire was in force.

On the first day of Linebacker II, 18 December, 129 B52s arrived over Hanoi in three waves, four to five hours apart. They attacked the airfields at Hoa Lac, Kep and Phuc Yen; the Kinh No complex; and the Yen Vien railyards. The aircraft flew in tight cells of three aircraft to maximize the mutual support benefits of their ECM equipment and flew straight and level to stabilize the bombing computers and ensure that all bombs fell on the military targets and not in civilian areas. The pilots of the early missions reported that “wall-to-wall SAMS” surrounded Hanoi as they neared its outskirts. On the first night of bombing, 18 December, and early in the morning of 19 December, two B52s were shot down by SAMs (Strategic Air Missiles). Major Richard Waller Cooper, Jr. was the navigator on the second B52 shot down.

Other United States aircraft were unable to establish radio contact with the downed six-man crew and a search and rescue mission was not attempted because the area was under enemy control, according to the Pentagon. Four of the crew were captured and held as prisoners of war. When they were released in 1973, they reported Cooper had been unable to eject from the airplane. According to the Pentagon, each crewman also said they saw only three other parachutes leaving the bomber.

United States investigators visiting a Vietnamese military museum in 1993 and 1994 found photographs, records, and artifacts that they believed were linked to the crashed bomber.

After determining the likely crash site, a joint United States-Vietnam excavation in the fall of 1995 found the wreckage of a B-52, personal effects, and human remains. A second excavation in early 1996 uncovered more personal effects and remains. Anthropological analysis by the Central Identification Laboratory, as well as mitochondrial DNA matches, confirmed the identification of Major Richard Cooper and Chief Master Sergeant Charlie Poole of Gibsland, Louisiana. Chief Master Sergeant Poole was the aerial gunner on the B-52.

Exactly 31 years after his plane was shot down in Vietnam, Air Force Major Richard Waller Cooper, Jr. was buried in Arlington National Cemetery on 19 December 2003.

Cooper is listed on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Panel 01W, Line 95.

Ernest Arthur Olds

Colonel, United States Air Force (Regular)

Entered the Service from Salisbury, Maryland
Colonel Olds was born 14 July 1934. After graduating from the United States Naval Academy, the Colonel chose the Air Force.

Colonel Ernie A. Olds and First Lieutenant Albert E. Rodriguez comprised the crew of an F4D Phantom fighter/bomber sent on a mission over North Vietnam on 11 March 1968. Their mission area was near a railroad which runs parallel to the Nguon Nay River in Quang Binh Province.

The F4 Phantom D model had only arrived in Vietnam the previous May and was initially part of the 555th Tactical Fighter Squadron's aircraft inventory. The D model was improved over the C model with the addition of a lead-computing sight and central air data computer for both bombing and navigation. The computer automatically determined the weapon release point for all bombing modes – dive or level, at night or in bad weather. The D model also launched Walleye television guided missiles and laser guided bombs. All in all, the Phantom was the “hot” aircraft of the day, and pilots were proud to fly them.

Olds and Rodriguez were both in “pilot” classifications; it remains unclear which man was the pilot and which was the backseat/bomber/navigator on the flight. Given the ranks and the fact that Rodriguez' military occupational specialty remains classified, it is assumed that Colonel Olds was the pilot and Rodriguez was “the guy in back” – the one with the extensive systems knowledge.

At a point about 5 miles southwest of the city of Ron, Olds and Rodriguez' aircraft was shot down. Other aircraft in the area saw the crash sight, but heard no emergency beepers, nor did they see any parachutes indicating that one or more of the crew had ejected from the crippled aircraft. Because the area in which the aircraft went down was a populous one, there is reason to believe that, if the crew survived, the enemy knew their fate. The area was not conducive for rescue efforts, although one would have commenced if there had been any indication that the crew was safe.

Since 1968, the Vietnamese denied any knowledge of the fates of the two men. On 24 July 1989, it was announced that the remains of First Lieutenant Albert E. Rodriguez had been “discovered”, positively identified, and returned by the Vietnamese to the United States. Colonel Ernest Arthur Olds' remains were identified 2 August 1996. His name was added to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial May 1997.

On 8 January 1968, a CH-53A helicopter assigned to Marine Helicopter Squadron HMH-463 crashed in the Hai Lang Forest. The crew of five and 36 passengers were killed in the crash. Of particular interest was the presence on the aircraft of a Marine Corps Officer known as, “Mr. Dye-marker”. The Dye-marker Project was a part of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara’s plan to construct a barbed wire and electronic barrier across South Vietnam to cut the infiltration of North Vietnamese soldiers and supplies across the Demilitarized Zone. The Officer had the Top Secret plans in a briefcase chained to his wrist. For additional information related to search and rescue attempts, there is a web page maintained by the USMC/Combat Helicopter Association at www.popasmoke.com.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial web page includes the following tribute for the Marine from a “little sister” in Salisbury; written Friday, 5 November 1999.

“You were probably the first man I ever really loved. Even though I am an only child, I considered you my Big Brother. I would wait breathlessly for you to come home from school every day. I remember sitting on the front porch step of your mother’s house with you in the afternoon. I loved you so much. I remember the last time I saw you. You had come home from California for leave. You were about ready to be shipped out to Nam. I was 9 years old. I remember you in your Marine dress blues. For your coming home on leave I had memorized the Marine Corps Hymn, ‘From the Halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli’. You seemed so tall and handsome, godlike. My knight in shining armor. Much like the later Marine Corps commercials. I remember the day you left to go back to California. I had a special surprise for you. As you went to the curb to catch that cab to the bus station, I stood on the top step of your Mother’s porch and sang the Marine Corps Hymn. You stopped and listened. You saluted me. The cab took you away and I never saw you again. One day, while I was at your mother’s house, a car arrived. Two men in uniform got out. Your mom screamed at the sight of them. I was rushed home. You see in a few weeks you would be coming home and we all were planning a big birthday bash for you. Instead they had to plan your funeral. I was numb when my mother told me what happened to you. I don’t think at the age of 11 I really knew how to grieve. Anyway, my mom would not let me go to your funeral. She and Dad went. I was left home, alone with my confusion and shock. There has never been any closure for me. Every day I find myself peering out my front door on my way to work, expecting that beautiful 19 year old boy to be walking up my sidewalk. My knight in shining armor. In his Marine dress blues. And I will sing the Marine Corps Hymn. And he will salute me. Your mom and dad are gone now. I have no idea ‘were’ your brother and sisters are. I see no one has written to you here. I will always remember, and love, and miss you.”
